

Dear Kathy

Now how do I put this.....this is an attempt at a thank you note, as no note or letter would be able to say 'thank you' enough. Thanks you for all those hours staring at hands that don't always get the right chords, for all those hours listening to the same song that you weren't always in the mood for, and lastly for all those hours listening to barely recognisable songs or tunes that weren't practised enough during last week.

Whatever the excuse, I speak for myself as well as all my fellow guitarists when I say that it has been a true privilege to learn from somebody with such skill and passion for the guitar. My guitar lessons were often the highlight of my day and I thank you for every moment I could learn from you.

I have stopped with my lessons for the time being but I will never stop with the guitar. You have really showed me what playing guitar actually means and inspired me in many ways. I thank you for your time, effort and for the will to share your skill and passion to those who are willing to learn.

So this is unfortunately goodbye for now.....but I will say hi when I see you.....and hopefully one day you'll see more of me.

I wish you the best of luck for 2012 and may your year be blessed.

Your most grateful student

Chris-Jan
